

Day 4 update: Woke up this morning with a really stiff right leg but after loosening up and taking a few advil i was good to go. Today we rode the same course as yesterday and as expected some hills were nice and challenging with all the silty dust covered ruts and loose rocks. The elevation changes throughout day make my ears pop, I'd say a little different than what we're used to in Louisiana. I made it through again with no route points and actually kept the rubber side down in the tests.

After completely toasting my rear tire yesterday we decided to go with a different brand...which was a smart move. The hill climbs are much easier with some descent traction now. I put on a couple new ones again for tomorrow which should be fun...from what we're told it will be the rockiest yet and just about all single track trail. Caselli is flying! I heard Juha fried his bike in the last test of the day (which now has 6' sand whoops since all 500 of us rode it twice a day since day 1).

sorry no pictures, our digital camera stopped working before we even got to Chili. check out gofasters.com